Disagreeable Work for Cold Weather.

Early Monday morning the heavy chain by means of which the logs are drawn from the pond to the saw at the Dowling mill, broke in two. The break happened to be in the bottom of the pond, and recovering the bottom end of the chain and joining the ends together was an extremely disagreeable job for all concerned. But Mack Mobley and Sam King, two doughty darlings, had undoubtedly the worst of it, for they had to get into the icy water of the pond. By the way they shivered it was evident that they were thoroughly refrigerated, and no one who has had a whiff from the water of the pond will doubt that they were performed enough to last them a year.

Slight Fire Saturday Morning.

Saturday morning the roof of the residence known as the Jerry Blitch house in the southwest part of Starke, owned by the J. G. Alvarez estate, and occupied by David Futch and family, caught fire. Mr. Futch and some neighbors, by heroic work, succeeded in quenching the flames and little damage was done to the building.

All the household goods belonging to the family had been moved out into the yard, and rather than move them back into the house, the floors of which were drenched with water, and suffer inconvenience while repairs could be done, Mr. Futch rented the Woodman building on Lafayette street, which was vacant, and moved his family there.

SIX STORES BURNED.

Thief Was Looking for Money, But Got Only Small Sum.

Sunday night no less than three stores in Starke were broken into by a burglar or burglars for the purpose of appropriating what "portable property" might be lying around loose.

In what order the stores were visited is not known, but as it is well known by both honest and dishonest persons that "there are no dull days at Leviton's," it may be presumed that his store was first entered in the hope of making a rich haul at once. A ladder was raised against the back door and the thief went in through the transom. But not even a nickel had been left in the till and the disgruntled visitor went out through the door, which he left wide open.

The next stop was probably at J. W. Morgan's, who is known to keep all sorts of money in a box on a shelf. A pane of glass in the back door was broken and the lock opened from the inside. But, alas for human plans, every penny had been shut up in the big safe and the doubly disgusted thief left.

J. F. Kitcher had done a roaring business Saturday night and his place was next tried. The humble thief again tried a back door with his usual success. The door on the east side of the store had one pane replaced with a pane of glass. This glass was taken out and the iron bar across the door on the inside pushed away. A little over three dollars was found in the till and this was all transferred to the thief's pocket and saved him from bankruptcy.

The thief, disgusted with Sunday night's bad luck, tried the game again Monday night. The store of J. W. White & Son was entered easily enough. The back door on Walnut street is provided with an opening to accommodate cats. The thief reached in through the hole and with a stick pushed away the bar across the door. He here found and appropriated $2 in small change.

The Mott brothers' store across the street from Mr. White's was entered next. The door on Walnut street was fastened with a bar, but the bar was so loose in its sockets that by pushing the door from the outside its two halves separated enough to admit a stick for lifting off the bar. Here the intruder found and pocketed 25 cents.

The doors of both the White and the Mott stores were in the full glare of an arc light.

The cigar and cold drinks store known as "Oscar's Place," now received attention. Back of the store is an annex, where the upper panels of the door are out, and thus the lock inside was easily opened. Between the annex and the store is a window, which was raised, and through it the store was entered. The modest sum of 38 cents was all that rewarded this "cheap skate" of a burglar. This place has a reputation for good cigars and a few were taken.

The thief was apparently a cautious hand, well acquainted with the places he entered. He seemed to be in quest of money only, so as to have nothing to give him away, for no goods have been discovered missing.

The officers of the law are on the lookout for the burglar or burglars and they confidently expect to nab them soon.

An Expensive Egg.

Two years ago a citizen of Starke, who is too modest to have his name mentioned by us, heard the voice of the incubator, that modern siren, which promises a pleasant occupation and enormous returns for a small investment. The incubator was procured, also two settings of eggs of a fancy breed of poultry at $6. From the eggs one chicken was hatched.

The chicken grew into a big, fine hen that could not be induced to lay by any means. Her doting owner procured over 100 poultry catalogues and bought an equal number of poultry foods, "warranted" to make hens lay. But the hen wore a far-away, dissatisfied expression on her countenance, as if looking for something unobtainable, and continued unproductive.

The other day the fancier's wife threw into the back yard a worn-out sewing machine. The cover happened to fall with the top down. It was immediately taken possession of by the hen, who laid an egg there and then. She had been looking for a sewing machine top for, lo, these many months and could not trust her eggs to any other receptacle.

The fancier made a calculation as to the cost of this egg, and found that with postage and "guaranteed" food it came to eight dollars. Horace Greeley and Orange Judd, of New York, and Grady, of Atlanta, noted poultry fanciers, never succeeded in bringing the cost of their eggs higher than 25 cents each. The egg is being saved for the Christmas egg.

DEATH OF JULE SQUIRES.

Investigation Showed That He Had Not Been Mistreated As Was Reported.

Last Friday morning a report was circulated to the effect that Jules Squires, a negro well known in Starke, had been driven out from his lodging place in Thomasville and had frozen to death during the night. Sheriff J. N. Langford went out there to enquire into the case and found out the following particulars:

Squires had lately been working on the Wannee branch phosphate train, but had received some injuries that incapacitated him to work and he also had chills and fever. He lodged with Dean Pailman, who keeps a little store in Thomasville, and he and Henry Sherman slept in a lean-to adjoining the store.

Early last Friday morning Squires awoke and complained of being very cold. Sherman got up and lit an oil heater and put some extra cover on Squires. But the latter, clothed only in an undershirt and drawers, rushed out of bed, opened the door and ran out on the street, although Sherman tried to make him come back. The morning was bitterly cold and the vitality of the man was low, in addition to being bare-footed and insufficiently clothed, soon chilled him through. He went to the place of Sarah Lewis, who made him sit by the stove while she got ready some breakfast and coffee, of which she made him partake. He then ran out again and went to John Parker's house.

He fell when he reached the door and was almost dead when Parker put him to bed. He died a few minutes later.

Mr. Langford could find no evidence of Squires having been ill treated and came to the conclusion that Squires had been the victim of a crazy spell at the time, and no inequity was held.

Jule Squires was well liked by all who knew him. About two years ago his marriage was held in the colored church in Thomasville. He asked the white people to be present and they were there in a big crowd, bringing a large number of presents, but of late his wife had left him and he had been shifting for himself.

Good News From Youth's Companion.

We have had to make The Youth's Companion larger to get in all the good things that Companion readers ought to have. The added amount would make four hundred pages of standard magazine size and print; but we have kept the price just the same—$1.75 for the fifty-two weeks of 1911, and all the issues for the rest of this year free from the time you send in your subscription.

We would like to tell you what is in store for Companion readers next year. We cannot do it here, though; there is not room. But send us your address on a postal card, and we will send you the beautiful Prospectus of The Companion for 1911, announcing many new features, together with sample copies of the paper.

We think you will agree, when you have read them, that there is no other paper that gives quite so much of such a high quality as The Companion.

The new subscriber receives a gift of The Companion's Art Calendar for 1911, reproducing in twelve colors and gold a beautiful water-color garden scene. The Youth's Companion, 144 Berkeley St., Boston, Mass.

W. T. WEEKS, Clerk.

Death of Mrs. Edith Burns.

Mrs. Edith Burns, wife of Mr. J. P. Burns, died at the home of her uncle, Mr. W. J. Howell, of Ft. White, Friday evening, December 1st. Undertaker W. C. Sammers, of High Springs, took charge of the remains, which were sent to Thomas and arrived there Sunday evening. The burial took place at Hope cemetery, Thomas, Tuesday. Rev. L. W. Kitcher, assisted by Rev. F. C. Edwards, conducting the obsequies.

The deceased was the youngest daughter of the late Mr. J. H. Moore, of Thomas. Before her marriage, in January, 1908, she taught school for several terms and was considered one of the county's best teachers. She early joined the Baptist church and was ever a consistent member, fulfilling every Christian duty. She was a devoted daughter and loving wife and a large circle of friends join the bereaved husband and family in mourning her departure.

After her marriage Mrs. Burns followed the fortunes of her husband, who taught school at different places until he entered the Medical College of the State of South Carolina, at Charleston. Since then she has divided her time between Charleston and Fort White. Only 12 months remain until Mr. Burns receives his diploma as a physician, and his departed helpmate did all she could to help him on in his chosen career and looked forward with pleasure to the time when he should reach the halls of his alma mater.

Of near relatives Mrs. Burns leaves to mourn her, besides her bereaved husband, her mother, three brothers and three sisters.

The funeral was witnessed by a large concourse of mourning friends and the floral offerings, from far and near, were profuse as well as beautiful.

HOLIDAY ROLL.

At Starke High School For Week Ending Friday, Dec. 2, 1910.

The holidays are fast approaching and busy work is the order of the day. Every pupil is striving to make his grade and every parent is anxious to see to it that his child is at school every day and thereby helping the teacher to help the child. Those who have one or more days in every week or more weeks in a month cannot be expected to keep up with this class or to make his grade; yet all the teachers are willing to help extra hours a boy or girl who has been providentially hindered.

The enrollment last reached 389 and others are expected before the holidays. Every day adds new vigor, new vim, new enthusiasm to the work of the school. For those who wish a commercial course there will be an opportunity in Starke High School commencing January the second. We have been fortunate in securing the service of an expert commercial teacher (now teaching in one of the business colleges of Jacksonville) to take charge of the commercial department. You will get exactly the same training as you would get if you were to attend the Jacksonville schools and we want you to note that you can get it here at two thirds the cost. Remember that this department will open January 2, 1911. The first 25 scholarships will be sold for half price and you will do well to get in as one of this number. For full particulars address, W. N. Henderson, Principal, Starke Normal and High School, Starke, Florida.

The Starke Normal and High School will spend work for the holidays on Wednesday Dec. 21, and will resume work again Monday Jan. 2, 1911. Quite a number of the teachers will spend the holidays with their home-folk and come are expecting to attend the State Teachers Association at Pensacola.
